

Digital Youth

Turkey, 11th – 20th October 2017

In today's digital age, youth workers should be able and ready to react to the new demands, challenges and opportunities it brings. It is becoming more and more important to have the ability to work with audiovisual materials and make professional documentation of activities in all areas of humans' work - including youth work. Also, audiovisual materials are not only a way to promote youth work, but also a very effective tool - activities of shooting videos or taking pictures are more and more common.

With this training we aim to promote the idea of audiovisual technology and media as a part of youth-worker's daily work and as a source of many great opportunities. We want to increase awareness of the fact, that audiovisual technology can be very effectively used as a tool in non-formal education of young people and a great method to develop many of their skills. The training is based on experiential learning approach – the participants will experience different activities with audiovisual technology and then they will develop the skills to use the same or similar activities with their young people.

We then want to spread this idea by organizing more projects on this topic with the help of the participants from this training. They will also carry out follow up activities in their sending organizations to share their experiences with their colleagues and peers.

The training course will gather around 30 participants (youth workers) in order to work together on the topic. We also want to address topics such as intercultural learning, sense of initiative, gender equality, etc. We want to explore the idea to use audiovisual technology also as a method of promoting these topics amongst young people.

Profile of the participants:

- Currently involved in working with young people on the regular basis or express serious commitment to get involved (peer-to-peer educators, youth leaders) in the future
- Ready to actively participate in whole project (preparation, training course and follow-up)
- Open to challenge themselves and learn a new approaches in youth work
